Task Two: Write the words.

Harry: That's 349 Dollars, please. How would you like to pay?

Som: Do you accept contactless visa cards?

Harry: Sure. Just confirm that the price on the screen is right.

Som: Yep. That's fine.

Harry: And tap your card on the terminal.

Som: OK. sorted!

Harry: I'm sorry. Your card has been declined.

Som: Oh, really? Hang on. I've got some cash in my bag.

Task Four: Finish the conversation with the phrases on the screen.

Emma: What do you think of the menu here, Mike?

Mike: Err... I think it's good.

Emma: But I think we need a bit more variety on it.

Mike: What do you mean?

Emma: Well, most cafes do the same as us: sandwiches, snacks, desserts, and beverages.

Mike: Yes, and that's what people go to cafes for.

Emma: I want to try some new and unusual ideas on the menu. That will get us a reputation for being different.

Mike: Hmm. That's an interesting idea.

Emma: Do you have any suggestions?

Mike: ~~I like that idea~~ We could try fusion food. You know, mixing food from two different countries.

Emma: Like what?

Mike: How about spaghetti sushi?

Emma: Hmm. Fusion food. I like that idea It'll get people talking about us. Any others?

Mike: Why don't we have a salad bar? People pay one price and they can go back as many times as they like.

Emma: I don't think that'll work People will stay for too long and eat too much! We won't make money from it.

Mike: Hmm. Yes, you're right. But I think people enjoy making their own things nowadays, and they like to experiment with new flavours.

Emma: That's certainly true. I've got an idea. Why don't we have a 'Pizza Corner'? People come in, build their own pizza from ingredients, and then we bake it for them.

Mike: That's a good idea It'll only take up a small area, and people can be as creative as they like.

Emma: Yes. That's it. Let's try having a Pizza Corner.
